Dear Sirs,

CRIMEWATCH 2020 EPISODE 10, TITLED "CHEATING"

We refer to your feedback regarding the above episode of "Crimewatch" (the "Episode") and would like to express our sincere apologies for the error made in the Episode.

The Episode featured a police case involving a man (the "Suspect") who was charged for cheating a victim into paying him S$175,000 (the "Police Case"). For purposes of illustrating the facts of the actual Police Case within the Episode, we had changed the names of some of the real parties involved, and also filmed some of the re-enactment scenes at Direct Funeral Services. Unfortunately, this created the wrong impression that the actual Suspect in the real Police Case was an employee of Direct Funeral Services.

We would like to take this opportunity to clarify that the actual Suspect in the Police Case was not an employee of Direct Funeral Services. Direct Funeral Services is not in any way related to the actual Police Case.

We deeply regret any inconvenience this may have caused. Please be assured that we had immediately taken down all versions of the Episode and stopped all repeat telecasts. All versions of the Episode will be edited to remove references to Direct Funeral Services, and we will only be using the edited versions thereafter.

Once again, please accept our sincere apologies for our error and for any inconvenience caused.

Yours faithfully,

Yvonne Chu
